Excerpt

Thomas? Verity knocked on the screen of his sleeping compartment. Her efforts were rewarded with a groan. She popped the steel blade of her defender and jimmied the door to the compartment open. Thomas lay on his side, moaning, his sandy hair hanging over his ashen face. His hands were bound together with shoelaces. Verity reached in and shook his shoulder, Thomas? What happened? The tutors eyelids flickered. His mouth was slack but he groaned something that sounded like Tamsin. Had Tamsin slipped Thomas a mickey and then tied him up in his sleeping compartment? The idea beggared belief. Where did they go, Thomas? Verity stood on her toes and reached inside to untie the laces. He groaned again then said, coffee or something similar. They went to the coffee shop? Verity gave Thomas another shake. His eyes fluttered shut again. Verity pressed the palm of her hand to Thomas forehead. He was clammy and cold. Oh, Thomas, what happened? She let her hand rest on his forehead for a moment. Could she really find them without Thomas? Her heart fluttered in her chest. She wouldnt think about without Thomas right now. Shed check the coffee instead. There was a coffee cup in the drinks holder of his sleeping compartment. Verity dipped her pointer finger in it, letting her

It is. Could you run a scan on the data I just sent? Absolutely. Does this have something to do with your brother and sister? The tech had a high-pitched note of panic in her voice. Yes, probably.
