About the Author: After living in several cities in several countries, Sobert Gummer came to the conclusion that the safest place for his family would be to move back to the United States and find a community of salt-of-the-earth people: Hard working people who worked in the trades and knew how to build stuff with their hands. Welders and mechanics and ex-military and ranchers and farmers. So, he found himself a small community adjacent to a small city that has good air, clean water, low taxes, excellent gun laws and reasonably priced homes. And he and his family finally settled down to continue their prepper lifestyle. Join him on this journey to discover the technologies, skills, tactics and strategies that will be needed to prepare for an uncertain future
