Just as they move their ears to pinpoint a sound, leporids (rabbits and hares) twitch their noses when trying to detect a smell. This twitching is called nose blinking. Rabbits and hares have about 17,000 taste buds. Like humans, they can tell between sweet, sour, bitter and salty foods. In the wild, they can also tell which plants are poisonous. Rabbits and hares sleep with their eyes open. Snowshoe hares are herbivores like other leporids but when food is scarce, they have been observed to steal the meat used as bait in traps and to even eat mice!
