

Fate of Worlds (Fleet of Worlds series Book 5)

The Ringworld, with its vast resources and technology so advanced that no species has yet unravelled its secrets, has disappeared from Known Space. And no spacefaring species knows why -- or isn't saying. Lous Wu, Sigmund Ausfaller and other humans must contend with the ferocious Pak and the new spacefaring species the Gwoth while trying to work with the devious Puppeteers to find and restore the Ringworld. Meanwhile, the Puppeteers, involved in their own internecine political struggles, must rely on a self-aware AI named Proteus to manage their own defenses. And Proteus is developing its own agenda... The fifth novel in the Niven/Lerner series that Booklist praised for its exceptional freshness and suspense...full of startling revelations about human and Puppeteer politics. Longtime Ringworld fans and current series devotees should be more than satisfied by Niven and Lerner's signature hard-sf spin on the events in the climactic final chapters. - Booklist on FATE OF WORLDS Brings to a stunning close a multivolume saga that has captured the imaginations of a multitude of readers a story that will attract attention from series fans as well as readers of hard sf. - Library Journal on FATE OF WORLDS A fantastic science fiction novel. - Layers of Thought on BETRAYER OF WORLDS Intelligent space opera, with a twinge of nostalgia for the 1970s. - Critical Mass (Don Dammassa reviews) on BETRAYER OF WORLDS Rescues, captures, kidnappings, reluctant temporary alliances, backdoor negotiations, propaganda campaigns, bluffs and double-bluffs, alien and cross-species politics, and, of course, betrayals.
