

Motherlover

In MOTHERLOVER, many selves speak: sister, lover, mother, stranger. All speak, though, from one body bearing up under puzzlement, and they speak, not pretending to hear angels in the music of a difficult landscape, but with more imposing purport: to weird the gray-scale quality of my life. Ginger Kos poetry epitomizes poetrys purchase, its capacity to contest the pervasive forces of grayness, of uniformity and conformity. MOTHERLOVER is formidable, a fierce weirding. -H. L. Hix

Ginger Kos MOTHERLOVER is at once supplication and rebuff. Ive been going back again and again to the book for its moments of airtight agony, unsparing in their demands. Despite everything: MOTHERLOVER doesnt want your sympathy. MOTHERLOVER doesnt want your disdain. MOTHERLOVER doesnt want your loyalty, even. It only wants you to let it alone, sit back down, and think about the errors of your ways. -Fanzine, Grace Shuyi Liew
