

Alien Possession: Escape

Luc Jameson was abducted by an alien race when he tried to save Vivika Vader and a vagrant from being abducted. His failure to save them made him doubt his bravery and he battles the idea that he has been a coward. Before he can prove himself, an alien mind was planted into his brain and he was put in an alien space ship and taken to an alien planet. After nearly a year of effort, Luc regains some control of his body and fashions a plan to return to Earth and recover his self esteem. But, he fears the alien imbedded in his brain will find out and stop him. He also fears someone else will find out his situation and turn him in to the Repopulation Project and his mind will be reprogrammed. The ArDinian race is nearly dead. The ArDinians only chance to save their race is human women. By abducting human women and implanting them with alien babies, the ArDinians are creating the next generation and saving their race from extinction. On ArDinia, freeing Vivika becomes Lucs obsession. He concentrates every minute on finding a way to get them home. Then, he meets Arianna and Beth who have been implanted with alien babies. They believe that if they return to Earth, they will have their alien baby and be sent to Area 51 to be dissected. ArDinia is also populated by a third group, the Cybots, machines who take orders and do whatever the ArDinians need. Luc worries that Earth is becoming much like ArDinia with the increasing use of computers and robots. In case anyone has forgotten: Six hundred years ago, nobody believed in America Three hundred years ago, nobody believed in the United States Two hundred years ago, nobody believed in automobiles or airplanes. One hundred years ago, nobody believed in television. Sixty years ago, nobody believed in cell phones or tablet computers. Thirty years ago, nobody believed in stealth airplanes. Ten years ago, nobody believed in cloud computing.

Today, nobody believes in aliens from space, or at least, only a few. What will happen tomorrow that we knew was impossible yesterday?
