

Selected Short Stories Featuring Analog Memory

Selected Short Stories Featuring Analog Memory collects fifteen of Nicolas Wilson's earlier short stories. These stories are dark, brooding, and entirely too intimate. Analog Memory contains:

Uncanny Valley: A man forced to be a luddite in a robotic world, by medical necessity, ponders whether his new fling is human.

Census: A census worker is murdered while doing his job.

Seed: An old woman meets a familiar face in an unfamiliar setting.

Faith Emmanuel: After a carjacking, a student finds himself financially at the mercy of a corrupt medical system.

Family Business: A marital fight ensues after a husband involves his kids in a life of crime.

Brickmouth: A buried vampire awakens.

Laborious Love: A robotic engineer builds the perfect girlfriend, and the perfect relationship.

Jesus Loves Me (Just Not That Way): A man wrestles with his sexuality.

Unlucky At Math: An intellectual ruminates on his relationship.

Fighting Mad: A soldier considers the toll that the military takes on Muslim soldiers.

Cowgirl Up: A memorial for a stubborn woman's fight with cancer, and love of smoking.

The Courage of Our Convictions: An old soldier examines the leavings of genocide.

Medicine: A friend falls back into addiction.

The Cost of Being Me: Some ruminations on the possibility of heaven, while dying.

Randomly Accessed Memory: A head injury causes a man to lose his memory, throwing his life into chaos as he regresses to his last known lifestyles.

Analog Memory: A former CIA operative has his memory reset in an unorthodox way, and deals with the glitches of the new technology.
